2012 ANNUAL REPORT

YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

Requests for programs from the Leave No Trace Center for Outdoor Ethics are at a record high. The sad reality is that we turn away over 90% of those requests because of limited resources. That's why your support is so essential today. Your continued generosity ensures that more Leave No Trace programs are on the ground in your community now and in the future.

Thank you!

The Leave No Trace Center for Outdoor Ethics protects the outdoors by teaching people how to enjoy it responsibly.

A STELLAR YEAR!

We are all in this together—working to protect the outdoors that collectively, we care so much about.

When I talk with Leave No Trace members and advocates, I am repeatedly struck by your passion, not only for the environment, but also for what you describe as Leave No Trace's role in protecting it. I've heard you loud and clear. You want more Leave No Trace programs for kids in the classroom. You want the Center to invest in more science and research. You want more Leave No Trace close-to-home.

You will be excited to hear that with your support this year, the Center is:

- » Working in thousands of classrooms across the country, developing tools for teachers to ensure that every child knows and practices Leave No Trace.
- » Training Leave No Trace leaders, community-by-community.
- » Laying the groundwork to ensure that there are more Traveling Trainers in your neck of the woods this year and beyond.
- » Engaged in research that will ultimately build stronger Leave No Trace programs.

And your commitment and resources help carry this work. We hope this report begins to demonstrate how your support of Leave No Trace has made such an important difference.

On the following pages, learn about the critical programs and research you support, view the organization's complete audited financial picture, and see your name along with other donors and partners that help make it all possible.

Thanks for all that you do.

PROFILES IN ACTIVISM

Making a Difference in South Louisiana

While growing up in New Orleans, member-activists Peggy Reily and Barrett Kennedy developed a deep appreciation for the distinctive environmental and cultural heritage of South Louisiana. The activities of their youth—paddling pirogues in bayous and lakes, fishing and crabbing in coastal bays, dancing to Cajun music at a Saturday night fais do-do—led them to careers involving the ecology (Peggy) and traditional architecture (Barrett) of the region. In recent years, the accelerating pace of coastal erosion and the cataclysmic effects of hurricanes have spurred Peggy and Barrett to join in collaborative efforts dedicated to preserving and protecting the threatened coastal environment and South Louisiana way of life. These former Subaru/Leave No Trace Traveling Trainers are currently the Louisiana State Advocates. Together with the Atchafalaya National Heritage Area, Peggy and Barrett are teaching Leave No Trace principles and cultivating the next generation of stewardship, interested in protecting the nation's largest freshwater swamp.

Inspiring the Nation's Paddlers to Leave No Trace

Long-time Leave No Trace partner, the American Canoe Association has been focused on preserving and protecting paddling environments since 1880. With their commitment to make the world a better place for paddling, they started the Stream to Sea Initiative, focusing on environmental ethics and stewardship within the paddling community. Leave No Trace education plays an integral role. The initiative's Paddle Green Events clean up waterways while teaching community members about Leave No Trace skills and ethics.

Training Leave No Trace Stewards in the Northeast

Active partner Adirondack Mountain Club understands the importance of Leave No Trace. Ryan Doyle, the Adirondack Mountain Club's Outdoor Leadership Coordinator is a Leave No Trace champion. He believes Leave No Trace is important because enjoying the outdoors responsibly is imperative to ensuring the integrity of and the experiences in our natural world. Throughout the year, The Adirondack Mountain Club holds events for its constituents with a Leave No Trace focus. In 2010, the organization was sanctioned to be a provider of Leave No Trace's highest level of training, the Master Educator Course.

Advocating for the Girls in the Outdoors in California

An avid backpacker and seeker of the wild, Leave No Trace member/activist Cynthia Fehler's heart has always been in the outdoors. As a five-year-old, she remembers seeing a cigarette butt on the ground and realized that she had to do something to protect the wilderness she held so dear. Cynthia is spreading her passion for protecting the environment by working with the Girl Scouts. Not only is she on a quest to teach young girls the importance of Leave No Trace principles, but she has also recently created the First Annual Leave No Trace Awareness Day in her community.

OUR STORY

The Leave No Trace concept was born in the 1960s with the U.S. Forest Service when recreation visits to wilderness areas were flourishing. With the need to serve a greater audience a national organization was formed in 1994, the Leave No Trace Center for Outdoor Ethics.

What has the Leave No Trace Center accomplished? A lot!

» Leave No Trace Builds Key Partnerships

Since 1994, the U.S. Forest Service, National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service have been active participants in the Leave No Trace program. In recent years, the nation's entire State Park System and the U.S Army Corps of Engineers have joined. Leave No Trace also enjoys partnerships with 500 corporations, businesses, nonprofits and municipalities and dozens of international groups.

» Leave No Trace Develops Training & Education Programs

Hundreds of thousands of people go through Leave No Trace training and education programs every year. In 2010, introductory online training was first introduced, expanding the organization's ability to train children and adults.

» Leave No Trace Generates Youth Initiatives

In 2003, the Center developed PEAK (Promoting Environmental Awareness in Kids), a program that has provided education for hundreds of thousands of American youth. PEAK was translated into Spanish in 2007. Unique Leave No Trace programs for teens were established in 2006 and new curricula for K-8th grade teachers was introduced in 2013.

» Leave No Trace Makes Grants

Since 2000, the Center has made grants to organizations and educators to develop Leave No Trace programs in their communities. We introduced Connect Grants in 2008 to reach culturally diverse populations and the Community Stewardship Initiative in 2013 to support outdoor and environmental nonprofits with Leave No Trace programs.

» Leave No Trace Partners with Scientific Community

Using research and science to build sound, pragmatic approaches to resource protection has been a cornerstone of the Leave No Trace program for 20 years. In 2013 the Center is applying our latest research on state park visitation to strengthen current programs and training.

» Leave No Trace Puts Education into Motion

Our innovative program put its first team of traveling educators on the road in 1999. Now in its 15th year, the program reaches millions of people in every state and grows each year.

» Leave No Trace Celebrates the Outdoors

The Center inspires positive, hopeful action to protect the outdoors. Leave No Trace's goal of building an army of active Leave No Trace volunteer educators across the country, results in reaching millions of people with Leave No Trace in 2013. These outdoor stewards celebrate the outdoors with the Leave No Trace Center through a collective effort to protect it.
